

Round Table of National Human Rights Institutions and National Machineries for the Advancement of Women

 Ouarzazate, Morocco, 15-20 November 2004 *****

DRAFT PROGRAMME

The objective of the Round Table is to strengthen capacity of national machineries for the advancement of women and national human rights institutions (NIs) to promote and protect the human rights of women, through the development of institutional links and joint strategies. The Round Table will be conducted in English, French and Spanish, with simultaneous interpretation.

The Division for the Advancement of Women (DAW) and the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) will make opening presentations on national machineries for the advancement of women and NIs, respectively. An expert of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) will give an overview of the Committee's practice in regard to the role of national machineries and NIs.

Each of the thematic sessions of the Round Table will be opened by participants' presentations on experiences and good practices. These will be followed by a discussion and exchange of experiences, including of constraints and challenges, among all participants. The Round Table will draw on the expertise and practical experience of the participants rather than on external speakers to identify major common issues and challenges, and to identify practical actions that can be taken at the country level and internationally for the promotion and protection of women's human rights by different stakeholders. Other sessions will be devoted to deepen the understanding of the role of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women in the promotion and protection of women's human rights.

The Round Table will cover five thematic issues: (1) the role of human rights education in promoting and protecting women's human rights; (2) enhancing enjoyment of human rights by disadvantaged groups of women (such as migrant, immigrant and minority women, and indigenous women); (3) institutional dimensions (4); the role of national institutions in implementation of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women; and (5) developing national action plans. The Round Table will conclude with identification of strategies for enhanced cooperation and coordination between the two sets of institutions.

14:00 - 15:30

Thematic session (1): Human rights education

This session will focus on sharing experiences on the role of human rights education in the promotion and protection of the human rights of women. In particular, participants will discuss the role human rights education plays in the work of their institutions, and the means and modalities for carrying out human rights education. It will assess how, and to what extent, human rights education incorporates a gender perspective, places a particular emphasis on women's human rights, and/or is targeted at women. Attention will be paid to the emphasis placed on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women in human rights education. In doing so, the session will also assess human rights education programming and implementation within the national education system, at all levels.

09:00 - 10:30

Thematic session (3): Institutional dimensions - Working in partnership for the protection and promotion of women's human rights

This session will focus on institutional set-ups at the country level for promotion of human rights, and for the advancement of women. Participants will share information on the mandate and power of their respective institutions, and their relationships with institutional partners (including Government and Government agencies, parliamentarians, political parties, and non-governmental organizations). They will focus on the type and extent of cooperation, and on coordination mechanisms that exist at national and local level, as well as at regional level. Experience of existing interaction and linkages between NIs and national machineries will be assessed, as will be the role of gender focal points in the various institutions in the realization of women's human rights. The session will also include ways in which the participating entities provide input into government policy, the importance of political leadership, and working with government agencies to achieve change.
